

Children's National School-Based Programs

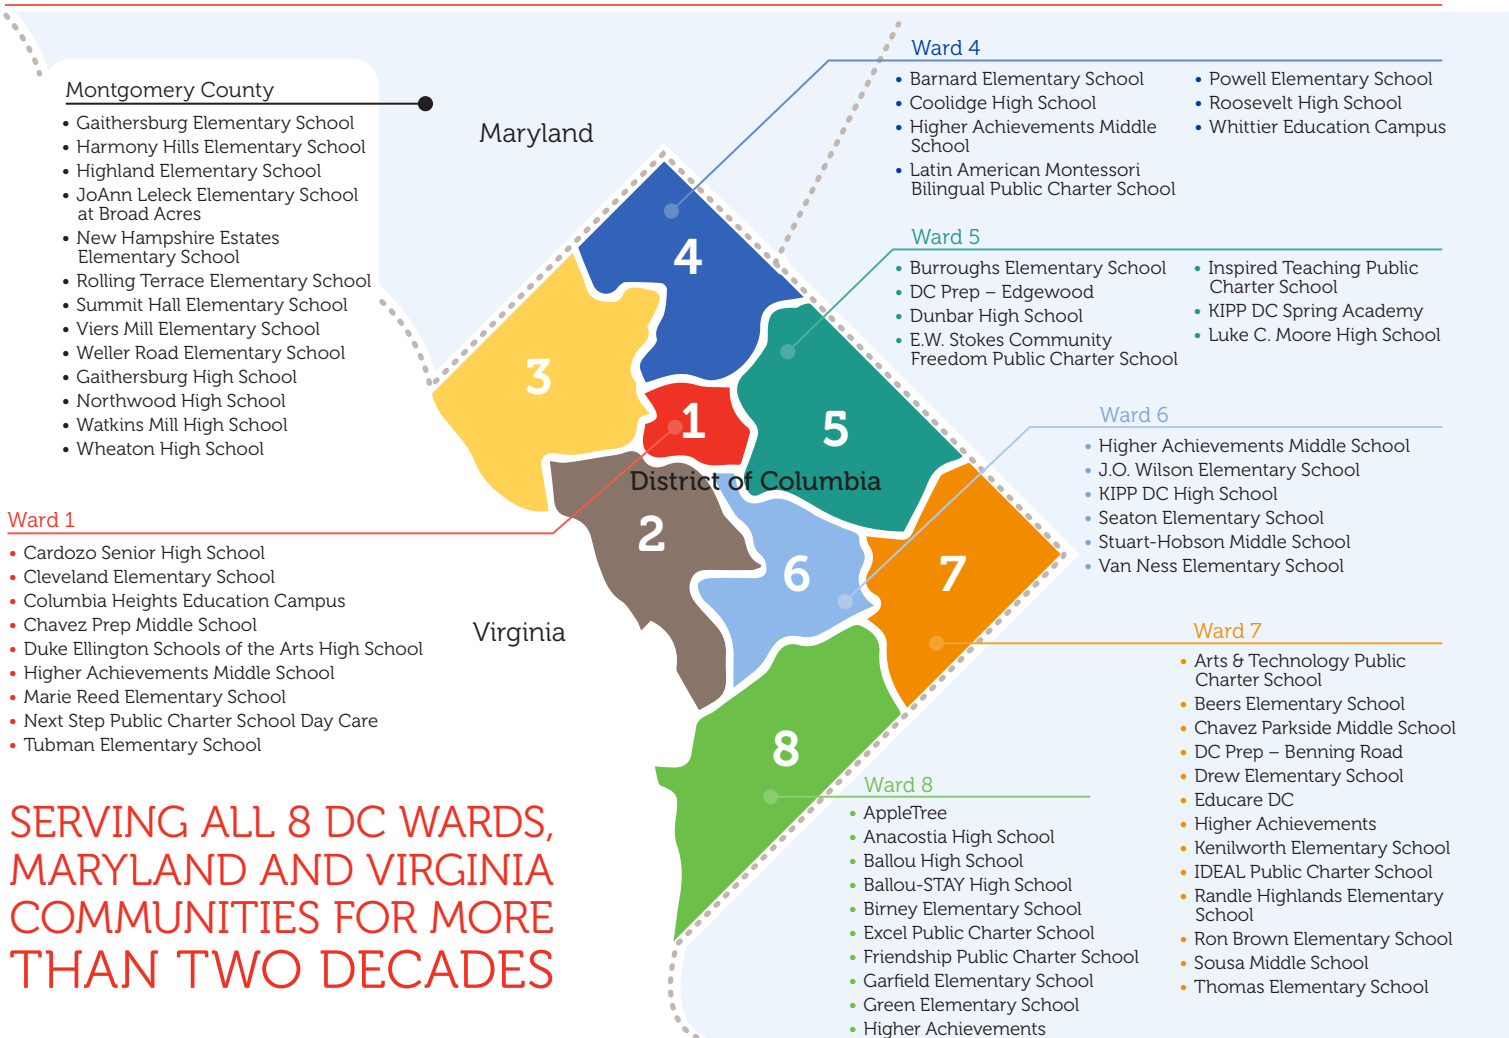

Children's National Health System is dedicated to optimal health outcomes for children. As an anchor institution and leading healthcare provider for children in the District of Columbia, Children's National has also served the K-12 public school system for more than two decades. Most notably, our Children's School Services, Inc. has operated and managed school nurses in Washington, DC public and public charter schools with oversight from DC Department of Health since 2001.

Our school-based efforts have expanded in recent years including acquiring management of three school-based health centers in DC high schools in 2016. The school-based health centers are comprehensive primary care clinics located within schools that offer medical, dental, social, and mental health services to enrolled students. Children's National school-based programs reach diverse populations including students, teachers, parents, and other support professionals and cut across many focus areas including asthma management, injury prevention, and mental health.
